

Affiliate Marketing Secrets Revealed

Spoiler Alert: It's easy!

Affiliate marketing is an awesome business model. It is a growing business, free to join and open to all. This is an excellent online business or work-from-home business. That means you get to make your own rules, I.e. work when you want, where you want and (mostly) how you want. There is no inventory, no reports, no staff, no building expense and no storage problems.

In short - this is a win-win-win business. Your customer gets what they want, the seller gets their payment, and you get a nice commission for very little work. And, because you do this online, you can do the work once, and get paid again and aga

As I said, this is a business that is expanding, that is open to everyone, regardless of race, age, physical ability or religion. In fact, any of these can be an advantage!

Not only does it allow practically anyone to create a substantial income online, but the process of getting your business rolling is incredibly simple. Becoming a successful affiliate will take a little time and effort. However, most beginners get it wrong!

There is a right way to do this and a wrong way. In this article, I'm going to show you the difference and how you can start the right way.

Despite what many 'online gurus' will have you believe, there is no "magic formula" to making affiliate sales. Like anything worthwhile, you need to learn the correct process and put in the effort if you want results. The good news is that over time those ‘results’ can be very exciting.

And I’m speaking from my own personal experience here.

I started building websites in 2003. But I was making money from building the website. It wasn’t until October 2015 that I started making money from the website. Call me slow learner! That’s when my affiliate marketing journey began.

I wanted some extra cash, so I answered an ad to drive someone else’s car for Uber. I signed up with his referral link. After 50 trips, I got a bonus. When I got a bonus, so did he. After he got a bonus, he started looking for a new driver. The bonus was easy money.

That’s when I realized I could also get bonuses by signing up new drivers for Uber. Only, I didn't need a car, I needed a website. It was a simple website but I worked hard to make it really good. I answered all the questions I could. And, that is what made it great. More on that later.

After Google indexed my new site, I started getting bonuses. Then I was earning small, regular commissions and in less than 2 years I was earning a full-time income as an affiliate.

Long story short, affiliate marketing changed my life.

I'm not some 'internet millionaire' or anything, but I do earn enough to live a comfortable lifestyle, doing something I love, from the comfort of home, and wherever I want. That's more than I ever got out of 9-to-5 job.

What this means for me is that when I work, I work long and hard. But then I can take weeks off and fool Google into thinking I am working when I'm not. More on this later.

Anyways, I've learned a LOT about affiliate marketing since then. I've literally gone from 'struggling newbie' into a 'super affiliate', just by following the right process.

This is the same process I'm going to share with you right now. Spoiler alert - it's easy, but not just copying and pasting a link.

So set aside any distractions and read this article in full. By the time you finish reading, you'll know exactly what affiliate marketing is, how it works and how you can get started for free.

Ready?

Okay, let's dive in!

What Is Affiliate Marketing?

Affiliate marketing is a business model where you earn commissions by promoting other company's products and services.

In other words, as an affiliate, you choose to partner with companies, you recommend their products and you receive a commission for referring buyers. You are the 'middle person' who connects vendors (sellers) with customers (buyers).

When you get this process right, the company (the vendor) is happy to pay you (the affiliate) a commission. Because you are sending them sales they would not otherwise have made.

This is similar to advertising, only better, for both you and the company. It's better for you because you can choose the products you recommend. It's better for the company because they get higher sales. It's also better for the rest of us because we all have less annoying advertising.

In fact, vendors LOVE affiliates, because they spend less on ads and affiliates get better results!

And there's clear evidence of this when you look at the numbers. According to statista.com, companies in the United States spent more than $8 billion in 2022. That amount is expected to increase dramatically.

These figures are staggering. Especially when you consider that the bulk of that money is not going to big corporate businesses, but instead going directly to individual affiliates like you and me!

Clearly, there's some serious money to be made here. And it's not too late to get your slice of the 'affiliate pie' either.

There are literally millions of products you can promote across practically any industry you can think of. So there's a TON of opportunity here, and there will continue to be opportunity well into the foreseeable future.

How Does Affiliate Marketing Work?

As I explained earlier, affiliate marketing is a business model whereby affiliates earn commissions promoting other people's stuff.

How Affiliate Marketing Works

Almost nobody likes be sold, but everybody has problems. When you can help people solve their problem with a product, they will often buy that product. You are solving problems for your visitors, and doing so in a way that makes a profit. This makes affiliate marketing a win-win-win business.

Most beginners just copy a product with their affiliate link. This is wrong. It may also get you banned from social media. It's also rude to your friends and visitors. It's like advertising, only worse. Experienced marketers put themselves in the mind their visitors who've problem. They they address this problem and eventually offer a solution.

Think of it this way, it's like going upstream. If there is a problem, it helps to see the cause of that problem, and then what caused the cause. Smart marketers can 'see the end in the beginning.'

In the following sections, I'm going to cover this concept in more detail, by looking at each individual 'role' in the process. So that you understand how the process works and what what role you play as an affiliate.

To kick things off, here's an overview of the three main 'roles' in the game of affiliate marketing:

1. The customer
2. The affiliate
3. The vendor

Each of these roles are essential to the process of affiliate marketing. Without any one of these, it simply doesn't work.

There's also a fourth (and optional) role, known as an affiliate network, which acts as an intermediary between you and the vendor. So instead of working directly with the vendor who's products you want to promote, you go through an affiliate network.

Now let's look at each of these roles in more detail...

The customer

The customer is the person who has a problem (which they may or may not have expressed) and seeking a solution. They may be willing to exchange their money, in return for a product or service if it solves their problem.

The affiliate (You)

You are the affiliate (sometimes referred to as the “publisher”). And the customer comes into contact with your marketing efforts, at some point before making a purchase with the vendor.

For example, imagine you're an affiliate for a "dog training equipment" company, and you have a website full of useful content about dog training. Product reviews, tips, how-to articles and so on.

The customer comes to your site in search of helpful information about dog training, which they find through a search engine or social platform. While on your site, they see an advertisement for a dog harness that you're promoting as an affiliate, and they click on it.

Or perhaps they were on your site reading a review of a dog training collar, since many people read reviews before buying, and they click on the link to buy after reading the review.

Either way, that person is on your site and clicks on your 'affiliate link', which takes them to the vendor's website, where they can then purchase the product. Thus earning you a commission.

The vendor (The Company)

This is the company that is actually selling the product or service you're promoting. They handle all of the 'hard stuff' like payment processing, order fulfillment, shipping, warranty issues and so forth.

So you are sending customers to the vendor site, where they can then make a purchase. And if the person you send to the vendor does buy, you'll earn a commission.

How much you earn, depends on the individual agreement, but this is typically 5-10% for physical products and 50-75% or higher for digital products.

Advertisers do their best to find good places for their ads. But there is no guarantee with advertising. People are getting more difficult to track. Sometimes that money is lost.

The reason vendors love affiliates is because they are literally only paying you for RESULTS. You send them a paying customer, they give you a slice of that sale.

The reason this is so awesome for affiliates, is because you don't need to worry about 95% of the BS that comes with running a traditional business. No inventory, shipping, dealing with annoying customers and all of that stuff.

The downside for affiliates is they usually don't get to make repeat sales on those customers. Once you've made a sale, that's it. But some vendors are changing this. More on this later.

There are two ways you can make up for this by promoting recurring commission offers, and by incorporating email marketing into your campaigns. Which I explain later in this article.

Third party affiliate networks (The Agents)

Some big companies know that affiliate marketing works, but they don't want to publicize that fact. They hide this by working with third part affiliate networks. An affiliate network acts as a kind of 'silent player' in the process.

Third party networks represent the company and sometimes qualify the affiliates. Sometimes they will require that you have a website or level of volume before you are approved. They act as an intermediary between you (the affiliate) and the company who's products you want to promote (the vendor).

Some well known examples of affiliate networks are AWIN, ClickBank and CJ Affiliate. I tend to not recommend these very much any more, but they can be a source of good income for the right product in the right place.

Joining any of these affiliate networks is 100% free of charge. And as an approved affiliate, you'll have the ability to promote products from a multitude of companies. In some cases, big name brands like Nike, Apple and even Gucci.

Once you choose a product to promote, the affiliate network will provide you with a special link called an 'affiliate link'. This is a link that is unique to YOU and the product you're promoting, so that the affiliate network can credit your sales for each company.

When you work with an affiliate network, you rarely (if ever) deal directly with the vendor. Because everything goes through the affiliate network. However, as I said earlier, using an affiliate network is optional.

Some companies, like Amazon for example, run their own affiliate program called Amazon Associates. So you can literally just go straight to Amazon and sign up directly, and get instant access to promote millions of products. Amazon used to be the default affiliate marketing source. However, Amazon is now one of the lowest commission paying companies.

Recap

As you can see, the process of affiliate marketing is quite simple when you break it down. You sign up with a vendor or affiliate network, choose a product, get your affiliate links and start promoting to earn commissions.

It's a simple process and it can be lucrative over time.

It's also beneficial for the vendor, since you're sending them sales. And it helps the customer, since you are directing them towards buying quality products you know they'll love. In the next section, I'll show you how to get started.

Beginner's Guide to Affiliate Marketing – How to Get Started

Up to this point, I've explained what affiliate marketing is and how the overall process works. In this section, I'm going to show you how to actually get started, so that you can build an affiliate business that you can be proud of.

Here's how to start an affiliate marketing business:

1. Choose your niche
2. Build a simple website
3. Attract visitors to your site
4. Earn revenue with affiliate offers

This is a simple and effective process that has been proven to work. I can say this with absolute confidence because this is the exact process I used to earn 6 figures per year online as an affiliate.

It's also (hands down) the lowest cost method of building your business. So you don't need a large bankroll to build your business or for advertising.

In the following sections, I'm going to detail these 4 steps.

1. Choose Your Niche

This is a critical step in building a successful affiliate business, and unfortunately, it's one that trips a lot of people up.

On one hand, you need to choose a good niche if you're going to be successful. Get this wrong, and you'll end up putting a lot of effort into your business, for minimal returns.

On the other hand, choosing the right niche can make your journey both enjoyable and profitable, for many years to come.

The good news is, choosing a profitable niche is a LOT easier than you may think, and I'm going to break it down for you.

So what exactly is a niche?

A niche is just a group of people looking for stuff online.

That's it.

When choosing a niche, all we are doing is identifying a group of people that we want to help with our site.

For example, “weight loss” is a niche and the group of people you are helping who want to lose weight.

By the same token, this is quite a broad niche, so ideally we would narrow this down to something more targeted, such as “weight loss for men” or “weight loss for men over 50”.

This is a better choice for a niche because it's more targeted. Which will lead to you becoming an authority within that niche, and your conversions will be higher as a result.

How do you know if you have a good niche idea?

Well first, practically ANY niche can be profitable. If you can get visitors to your site, you can make money. But there are a few questions you can ask yourself when selecting your niche that can steer you in a more profitable direction.

Are you interested in your niche?

Is there traffic potential within this niche?

Are the people in your niche buying products online?

Asking yourself the above questions will help you choose a niche you'll actually enjoy building your business around, and one that will actually create you a profit.

Let's take a closer look at each question...

Are You Interested in this Niche?

Being interested in your niche goes a long way, and this is where I recommend you begin when coming up with niche ideas. Your main goal as an affiliate is helping people with your site. This is a lot easier when you are interested in the topic.

You may be spending a lot of time researching and creating content (because this is how you will be driving traffic to your site), which is going to be a LOT easier if you're interested in your niche.

Not to mention, people can see when you care about helping them, versus when you're just trying to 'sell' them something. Which can have a huge impact on conversions.

It's possible to turn virtually any passion or interest into a profitable site. So while there are other factors to consider when selecting a good niche, starting your search around topics that interest you is a great way to go.

Is There Traffic Potential Within This Niche?

Traffic (visitors to your site) is your bread and butter as an affiliate. Without traffic, you'll make zero dollars. With it, you'll thrive.

There's billions of people online, searching for information and buying products. Which means there are countless niches with traffic potential.

Assuming you don't choose a niche too narrow, you'll find there's plenty of traffic to go around.

As you develop your skillset as an affiliate, you will come to learn how to do keyword research. Which is one of the best ways to gain insight into the traffic potential within a given niche. I'll explain more about this process shortly.

Are the People in Your Niche Buying Products Online?

You can be interested in the topic, and be getting lots of traffic, but if those people aren't buying anything online you aren't going to be making any money as an affiliate.

It helps to make sure people are actually buying products or services within your niche. Nearly every niche is increasing. Because most people buy stuff online these days.

One way to gauge 'buyer interest' is to visit sites like Amazon and look for customer reviews. If people are regularly leaving reviews for a given type of product, then chances are a LOT more people are actually buying.

You don't need to limit yourself to physical products either, there are many digital products and services that you can promote. As long as it's relevant to your audience, you can promote it. And of course if it's a digital product, people are buying it online.

In any case, by asking yourself these few simple questions, you will be well on your way to selecting a profitable niche.

Don't overthink choosing a niche. Because action trumps overthinking any day of the week. Even if your first niche doesn't work out, it almost certainly won't be your last, and you'll learn a lot in the process.

All humans are imperfect beings, so don't wait for something to be perfect. My recommendation is to make a beginning. And then make it better. So take action, and do not overthink this step!

2. Build a Simple Website

The reason you need a website is you can't post the raw affiliate links directly on social media. If you get caught, you will likely be banned. Social media are somebody else's website where they make the rules and they want to make the profit.

Building a website does several things you need. It 'cloaks' your affiliate link, gives you a landing page, and a bridge page. This is also where you can confirm email addresses and build a list for marketing related products later.

Your website is a critical part of creating a successful affiliate marketing business because it also builds your authority in your niche. Thanks to modern technology, it's actually the simplest step in the process!

Why do you need a website?

The short answer is: a website is the foundation of a successful affiliate business and it's the primary tool you are going to be using to generate traffic and affiliate sales.

You can do affiliate marketing without a website, and some people see great results this way. But in my opinion, building a website is superior in practically every way possible.

And there are three main reasons I say this.

First, having your own site means you OWN that asset. One that you can potentially sell for a considerable profit down the road, once your site is in good shape. And unlike affiliates who rely on social media sites like Facebook, for example, your site won't suddenly be 'taken down' for breaching a rule you didn't even know existed.

Second, by using the website approach, you can leverage free quality traffic through Google and Bing, which is incredibly beneficial to your business. Traffic is the lifeblood of every affiliate business, as I explain in step 3.

Third, with the website approach, you'll naturally build a lot more trust with your audience and those your partners.

Because you are giving people value, instead of just trying to sell stuff. Which in turn will lead to higher conversions and more opportunities to work with better quality companies.

Fourth, over time, you build a community of people who refer others, who refer their friends. You can do many more things with your website that you can't do with social media. For example, capture email address for your list, create new pages, share to social media and more. You become known for your website.

Anyway, now that I've shown you how to build a website and discussed why you need one to create a successful affiliate business, let's take a look at what's "under the hood" of a website. You don't need to know technical stuff, but a better understanding of how things work is helpful. Let me give you an overview.

So, how do you build a website?

There are lots of ways to create an affiliate website. However, in my opinion, the best and simplest way is to create a website using TapSuccess' Website Builder.

And I've put together a short video that walks you through the process:

Video showing the process of building a website at TapSuccess.

TapSuccess makes building your website easy; it literally takes less than a minute to get your site built. You'll be amazed at how simple the process is.

In short, there are three main parts to a website:

Domain name

Web hosting

Content Management System (CMS)

A domain name is the ‘virtual address’ of your site (for example tapsuccess.com is a domain name). This is how people know how to get to your site.

Websites can live on almost any computer, but nobody else would be able to see it. Web hosting is what makes your site ‘live’ on the internet. Every website needs hosting.

A CMS (the website ‘operating system’) is the platform you use to create your site and the content that goes into it. I personally use WordPress, as do millions of other site owners, because it’s simple and effective.

If this is your first website, you might feel more comfortable with Website Builder.

The choice sup to you. There is a slight learning curve with WordPress.

You can buy a domain name for about $14 per year, get halfway decent hosting for less than $10 per month, and WordPress is free to install. So as you can see, the costs are very low when it comes to building your site.

However, trying to put all of these elements together as a newbie, without proper training, can be an absolute nightmare. You really don't want to spend any more time than necessary on this step that could be far better spent on building your business.

So to get rolling as quickly and easily as possible, I recommend you skip all the technical stuff and check out the video above. That way, you can have your site up and running within the next few minutes if you want. Fully live, hosted, and ready to go!

3. Attract Quality Visitors (Traffic) to Your Site

Traffic is the life blood of every affiliate business.

As an affiliate, you want as many of the right type of people in front of your affiliate offers as humanly possible. And there are TWO main ways you can get this traffic:

- Traffic you buy
- Traffic you earn

Buying traffic is good if you're an intermediate to experienced affiliate, and you have a decent bank roll. This can be an excellent way to scale your business and create a lot of success.

But it's not the best option for newbies in my opinion.

Unfortunately, most 'make money online' programs teach 'quick and easy' paid traffic methods, like buying solo ads. Which is one of the main reasons why so many people fail at affiliate marketing.

Earning traffic is a FAR better approach for a beginner.

First of all it's 100% free, which significantly reduces your risk and allows you to the time you need to learn, before you start spending lots of cash on ads. And second, free traffic can also be very high quality. So free doesn't mean 'cheap' in this case.

Specifically, I'm talking about free traffic through search engines like Google.

When you follow the right process, you can have your content ranking high in Google search, which will bring you free, targeted, quality traffic.

It's not hard to learn how to do this effectively, but it does take time and effort. In fact, this is where the bulk of your affiliate efforts are going to be within the first 3-6 months of building out your site.

So how do you get quality free traffic to your site?

Well, the process of getting rankings and traffic from search engines, mostly comes down to these TWO things...

- Performing keyword research
- Creating good quality content

These are ALL skills you can learn and become very good at over time.

I was in web construction before I started doing affiliate marketing. And now I drive 100,000's of visitors to my sites each year, just by doing these things well.

So you can learn this stuff, it just takes some effort.

Keyword Research

A 'keyword' is just a search term people are typing into Google to find something.

For example "how to lose 10 pounds in 2 weeks" is a keyword. And the reason keyword research matters is because this is how you know what you're going to write about.

The idea is to find out what keywords your audience are using to find information, and create your content based on those keywords.

There are endless amounts of good keywords across every niche imaginable. So once you learn this process it will open up a lot of doors for you.

I have made some videos on keyword research. There are lots of other good sources online. Basically, you want to use Google suggestions to find key words with moderate answers, but high searches. You can gauge search volume in Google Trends. You can learn more about keyword research here.

Quality Content

Quality content is by far the most important element of all. But at the same time, you don't need to be a fancy writer to create high quality content.

All you need to do, is create content that helps your audience in some way.

For example product reviews, how to articles, guides and anything your audience is searching for, is something you can create blog posts around.

When you combine good keyword selection with quality content, you will be in a position to drive a lot of traffic to your site.

There are other elements that go into ranking in Google, but these are paramount.

At the end of this article, I'll show you how you can get your hands on a free training that walks you through this, and every other concept I've explained, in a lot more detail.

For now, just know that by getting these three elements right, you will get traffic. And as a result, you will be in a prime position to earn regular affiliate commissions.

4. Earn Revenue With Affiliate Offers

This is the fun part of being an affiliate - earning revenue.

This step is all about recommending relevant products and services to your audience. Which in turn, will equate to a profit if and when a percentage of your visitors buy.

And this step is easy when you've followed the previous three steps properly.

Here's why:

First, you've already got targeted traffic on your site, and the people in your niche are already buying the types of products you're promoting. So 'recommending' something you know they'll enjoy, is easy.

Second, you've started the relationship with your visitors by giving them value, through your helpful content. As a result, you've built trust and goodwill, which is essential to making affiliate sales.

Third, the actual process of signing up with an affiliate network, getting your affiliate links and inserting them into your site, is very simple. Like every other aspect of this process, over time it will become second nature.

All you are doing is inserting your affiliate links within your content, to encourage people to make a purchase.

Ideally, you have had the same problem your visitor has and you solved that problem with the product you are recommending. You are not 'selling stuff'. You are 'recommending quality products' that your visitors are going to like. Obviously not everyone will buy, that will never be the case, but a percentage will.

Affiliate marketing is a numbers game. The more quality traffic you have, and the more you fine tune your marketing over time, the more money you will make.

Also worth mentioning is that there are different types of affiliate products you can promote, and what you choose to promote can make a big difference to your bottom line. Essentially there are three ways to increase your income:

1. Higher price
2. Sell more volume
3. Sell more often

The first, higher price, means obviously to raise the price of your product. Sometimes this is a good strategy. It takes about the same amount of work to sell a high-ticket item as it does a low-ticket item. It can also mean marketing a different product. This is what I did by marketing Uber drivers. The commission was hundreds and sometimes a thousand dollars.

The second, sell more volume, means to sell your products wholesale or in bulk. You can also change your location or marketing to accomplish this. If a percentage of visitors become customers, then finding a larger volume of visitors means more customers.

The third, sell more often, means to sell subscriptions. This is something more popular in online sales. Big companies like Apple and Adobe are doing this. This means a lower initial price, but it never ends, meaning this is a lot more income over time.

These are choices that are entirely up to you. Personally, I love recurring subscription affiliate offers.

Web hosting is a good example of this. Once people build a website that is making them a profit, they tend to keep that website and see the hosting fees as a necessary cost of business. Big companies know this and most hosting companies have been combined into a corporate monopoly.

This is why TapSuccess is different. We are a small, independent company. We are not MLM (multi-level marketing) nor get-rich-quick. We are authorized resellers for one of the world's top brands. This is a program that can continue indefinitely, but is no longer offered to the public.

Because this creates steady, reliable income for you. Even if your traffic fluctuates from one month to the next, the money keeps a steady pace. This is because you made the sale once and subscribers are generally loyal.

In any case, as you progress in your business and develop your skillset, you will come to learn what works for you and your niche. And you can experiment by promoting different types of products to see what converts best.

You can also look into things like email marketing once your site is in good shape.

Once you have the foundation of your business in place (ie. a website that generates steady traffic), building an email list is easy. And doing so can help you build better relationships with your audience, and ultimately increase affiliate revenue.

In any case, you don't want to spend too much time worrying about this step, at this stage of your journey. The most important thing is to build an audience which you will do by following the previous 3 steps.

When you follow the process, making affiliate sales is simple.

With that being said, you might still be wondering if the “average person” can really make money doing this stuff. And if so, how long is it going to take to start making money?

Read on...

Can You Really Make Money Doing Affiliate Marketing?

Yes!

You can make money with affiliate marketing. If you follow the right process and take massive action, then it's really just a matter of how much money you'll make, and how soon you'll make it.

Which in my experience boils down to how much effort you put in and how persistent you are when it comes to building and scaling your business.

Affiliate marketing is a simple business model and it can be very lucrative. But like any worthwhile endeavor, it does take effort and time to get into profit.

You may make mistakes along the way, you will doubt yourself at times and you may sometimes even feel like quitting. But if you stick with it - you can and will succeed.

And the rewards are WELL worth it in my experience.

To help put things into perspective, I often compare the path to becoming an affiliate marketer, with that of doing a traditional university degree.

On one hand, you could rack up $10,000's in debt and spend 3-5 years of your time going to university. In the hopes that 'maybe' you'll get an entry level job that you'll probably end up hating before too long.

On the other hand, you can learn how to become an affiliate marketer, without going into debt, and within 2-3 years be earning a full time income. And unlike a typical 'job', you'll enjoy what you do, and have the freedom only an online business can give you.

I'm not against traditional education. But I do think this comparison helps to put things into perspective.

As an affiliate, you are building a long term, viable business that you can scale to any height you want. You just need to be willing to take action.

Those who are persistent and put in the effort, reap the rewards. Those who dive in 'half way' and want everything to happen overnight, earn very little (if any) money at all. It's really that simple.

Summing It Up

If you've read this far, well done! This was a huge article so you're clearly serious about building an affiliate business, which is good to see.

I love sharing this stuff with you because it works. There's so much opportunity within affiliate marketing, that anyone willing to put in the effort can be successful.

Once you get the process dialed in, you can (literally) be earning money while you sleep. People can view your website and make a purchase from another time zone. In other words, passive income. Which, in my view, is better any other job out there.

Cool, but where do you go from here?

Well, one option is you could take what I've shown you and try to "go it alone". Honestly, that will probably take you a lot longer, given you are just kind of "figuring it out as you go along".

So if you have at least a few spare dollars to start your business, there are better options. Like getting yourself access to a proven step-by-step training course, proper tools, and mentoring from people who actually know their stuff.

And this is where sites like TapSuccess come into play.

This is the platform I used to go from total newbie, making zero dollars, to super affiliate, earning 6 figures per year. Literally everything you need to build a thriving affiliate business is all under one roof. It's well worth checking out, it's cheap to start, you can start part-time, and everything you do can accumulate.

Whatever you decide, I hope you found this article helpful. And as always, if you have any comments or questions, let me know!
